Taking the Initiative: Should Conservatives Stop Playing
Defense on the Environment?

Guest Speakers:

Robert Sopuck, MP for Dauphin-Swan River-Neepawa

Allan Gregg, Earncliffe Strategy Group

Robert Sopuck is the Deputy Shadow Minister for Environment and Climate Change, Wildlife Conservation and Parks Canada. This role uses his experience as a biologist and avid outdoors man to ensure the federal government continues to enact legislation that achieves tangible environmental benefits that do not harm Canada's rural communities.

Allan Gregg is among Canada's most recognized and respected researchers, strategists and social commentators. He has played a central role in dozens of campaigns over the last thirty years. His unique talent at Earncliffe is to develop research-based strategies and then translate them into all aspects of campaign management - from policy and speeches to media relations; from communications and advertising to targeted grassroots campaigns.

This presentation and discussion will review current attitudes toward resource development and the environment and give insights into how applying conservative environmental principles can not only deal with current and emerging environmental issues but also find broad appeal across Canada and in the ballot box.
